PORT WASHINGTON SCHOOLS COLLECTION

INTRODUCTION:

Until 1908, there were two school districts within the boundaries of Port Washington. School District No. 4 encompassed the area around Flower Hill (the section up from the Neck, this district was colloquially referred to as the “Up Neck” school district), and School District No. 5 the Sands Point area (the section down on the Neck, referred to as the “Down Neck” school district).

In 1748, the first schoolteacher arrived in Cow Neck, answering an ad placed in the New York Mercury which read, “Thomas Dodge and Petrus Onderdonk want a man well qualified to teach school in Cow Neck.” Before there was a formal schoolhouse, the teacher would travel and teach in local settlers’ homes. But the first dedicated schoolhouse in Port Washington built in 1757 in the Flower Hill section came to be known as District No. 4. It consisted of one room and was located on the former Onderdonk property on the east side of Port Washington Boulevard, across from Nassau Knolls. It was in operation for about one hundred years. No one knows exactly what happened to this building, but it is possible that the building materials were repurposed to build the next Flower Hill School. Flower Hill School #2 was built about 1869 on the west side of Port Washington Boulevard adjacent to Nassau Knolls cemetery. Originally consisting of two rooms, it expanded to four rooms in 1897 in expectation of a population boom brought on by the extension of the LIRR to Port Washington in 1898. In 1904 Flower Hill School was rebuilt and expanded again a year later. In 1924 this school was seriously damaged by fire and never reopened. A new Flower Hill School building began construction in 1924 on land purchased from J.C. Monfort. The building opened in 1926 despite criticism for its “English country school” design and a court case related to its cost. The Flower Hill Elementary school closed in 1979. The building for a time in the 1990s housed the prekindergarten program and administration offices. Due to increasing enrollments and only one middle school in the district, the building eventually became part of an expanded C.P. Weber Middle School.

The “Little Red Schoolhouse” was built prior to 1841 in the Down Neck area at the north corner of Pleasant Avenue and Mill Pond Road. In 1859 the building moved to the south corner of Pleasant Avenue to make room for the Port Washington Free Church. Although the building stood until 1926, it ceased operating as a school after 1870. As the population increased a new and larger Down Neck School, Sands Point School #1, was erected on School Street in 1870. Impressive for its day, this three-room school, later expanded to five, was eventually outgrown by Port Washington’s booming population and, in 1899, was sold, moved to the south side of School Street and converted into a private home. Sands Point School #2, built in 1899, was located on the hill overlooking Mill Pond on the east side of Harbor Road, approximately where the Sewer District building is located today. Palmer Jones, first superintendent of PWUFSD #4, served as principal here in the early 1900s, and Miss Charlotte Merriman (namesake of the Merriman School, demolished in 1980 for a park in the Manhasset Bay Estates area) got her start teaching there. Sands Point School #2 was open for 60 years until population growth in the late 1920s necessitated the building of the third and final Sands Point School; School #2 was razed in 1930. In 1929 a new Sands Point School was built on Rockwood Avenue; it was rededicated as the John J. Daly Elementary School in 1969.

Around 1916, the district added Hempstead Harbor School on West Shore Road to accommodate the children of the sand miners who worked and lived in that area. The school closed in about 1930 and the building was sold to become a private residence. The students were reassigned to two new schools, Flower Hill (1926) and Sands Point (1929).

In 1908, the same year that school districts #4 and #5 combined to become the consolidated Union Free School District No. 4, the cornerstone to Port Washington's largest school yet was laid. Built on five acres of farmland formerly owned by Thomas E. Webb, Port Washington High School was on September 17, 1909, in an event described as "the largest and greatest event in community history." The building was Port Washington's first high school but also housed grade school students. Port Washington High School reflected a huge leap forward in population growth but needed enlarging in 1917. Outgrown again, a new high school was built on Port Washington Boulevard, the second Port Washington High School, which opened in 1929; the first Port Washington High School, now called Main Street School, became a kindergarten to grade 8 school. In 1953, Main Street School became solely a K-6 elementary school and continued as such until 1985 when the school closed. In 1995, the building became a multi-use community center known as The Landmark on Main Street, housing activities for children and teens, a parent resource center, the Jeanne Rimsky Theater, and apartments for senior citizens. The building was listed on both the New York State Register of Historic Places and the National Register of Historic Places.

The new Port Washington High School, built along Port Washington Boulevard on land belonging to Cliff Monfort opened in 1929. The brick façade of Port Washington High School matched that of the Flower Hill School joined by a connecting corridor. In 1953, the Port Washington High School building became Port Washington Junior High School (serving students in grades 7-9). In that same year, a new high school built at the top of Campus Drive opened. It was dedicated to Paul D. Schreiber, the former principal of Main Street School and Superintendent of UFSD No. 4. When a second junior high school named for John Philip Sousa opened in 1958, Port Washington Junior High School was renamed in memory of Carrie Palmer Weber, a former principal. In 1995, Weber expanded to grades 6-8, and the former Flower Hill School became a part of the junior high building. Today, Green and Blue Houses are in the old Flower Hill building while Red and Yellow Houses are in the former junior high school building.

In response to the post-World War II baby boom, new elementary schools were constructed. The Salem Elementary School, built in 1951, was a satellite of Flower Hill Elementary School. Schools were also built in other sections of Port for the growing population: Charlotte Merriman School built in 1952 in the Manhasset Bay Estates area housed a kindergarten program as part of Main Street Elementary School; the Manorhaven Elementary School was built in 1952 on the edge of the villages of Manorhaven and Sands Point; the Guggenheim School opened in 1962. Overcrowding in Port Washington Junior High School led to construction of John Philip Sousa Junior High School between the villages of Manorhaven and Port Washington North in 1958.

In addition to the number of public schools in Port Washington, there have been several private schools. These included the Vincent Smith School built in Flower Hill in 1924 and serving students with learning disabilities in grades 1-12; St. Peter of Alcantra Catholic School, built on the church property along Port Washington Boulevard in 1925 and closed in 2020; the Sands Point Country Day School, also known as the Sands Point Academy, a K-12 private school housed in Elm Court, the former Edgar Luckenback estate. This school, marketed as a “Center for Gifted Children” by founder Marie L. Fetsch, closed in 1974 following allegations of fraud.

From the 1970s through the 2000s, school buildings have been modified or repurposed to meet declines and then increases in the student population. The Merriman School closed in 1977, followed by the Flower Hill School in 1979. In 1985, a major reorganization of the schools occurred: The Main Street and Salem elementary schools closed, and Sousa Junior High converted to Sousa Elementary School serving grades K-6. In the 2000s, changing enrollments necessitated the reopening of Salem Elementary School (2005) and enlarging Weber Middle School by including the former Flower Hill Elementary building. To meet an increasing middle school population, a further addition was added to Weber Middle School, bringing the school’s footprint up to Port Washington Boulevard.

Daly School (formerly Sands Point School), upon his retirement in 1991. Also included are photographs and other documents and ephemera donated by multiple individuals over the years. Among these items are a collection of junior high school graduation programs donated by Kathleen McEntegart, an art teacher in Port between 1942 and 1993; junior high school yearbooks and elementary school merit awards donated by the family of Oscar Petersen; an 1820 assembly program and an 1828 invitation donated by Dick Whittemore; yearbooks and photographs from the 1920s donated by Charlotte Wackwitz Stove; St. Peter of Alcantara School photographs donated by former teacher Peter Larmour; and in 1985, directories, programs, and Schreiber High and Sousa Jr. High memorabilia donated by Beverly Broglio Pavlak, a former student at those schools, a parent active in community organizations, and a teacher at Main Street and Sousa elementary schools. Former student and resident Barbara Love Mayer donated 13 digital photo albums covering her elementary school teaching career at Main Street, Manorhaven and Guggenheim from 1972-2006. The collection includes class and faculty, classroom and school plays, programs, and events at those schools.

Records pertaining to several private schools that once existed in Port Washington are included in Series V. The collection also contains information on the fight to save the Main Street School and the subsequent landmark designation for the building donated by Elly Shodell, former History Center librarian and Port resident.

Note: Copies of The Port Light high school yearbooks, v.4 (1919) – v.6 (1921); v.8 (1923) – v.11 (1926); v.22 (1937) donated by Marie Dodge Ross, Charlotte Wackwitz Stove, and Oscar Petersen were added to the Yearbook Collection, as were Stars & Stripes (1959 Sousa yearbook) and several elementary and junior high school yearbooks.
